

Finished.

The XXXVII general assembly adjourned on Thursday last, after a session of seventy-nine days. Perhaps the most important general bill introduced by the Legislature was introduced by Senator Chapman, a brief of the law was published in our columns last week. It has not yet received the approval of the governor, but it is a good one, and we trust will fail to become law. It is much better after the Massachusetts law, which is one of the most comprehensive measures ever enacted, by any of the states, and its enforcement and results in disposing of many of the corrupt practices therein.

Second in importance of general interest are the changes to the revenue laws and the depreciation made of the money by appropriation or otherwise. The estimated increase of revenue into the state revenue fund by these changes will be $1,000,000, and will come almost entirely from the increase of the state drainage tax from $50 to $100 a year and the transfer of funds from the insurance department to the revenue fund. The money appropriated by this session aggregates $1,000,000.

The legislation enacted for benefit of the farmer consists mainly in the proposed amendment to the constitution to authorize county courts to levy an ad valorem tax on the value of real property and a bill to permit counties to work public improvements on the township organization plan.

In all legislation affecting corporations, the present legislative session has failed completely. The underground wire-braiding bill, the minimum freight rate bill, and the bill to prevent bill have been staved off, and sleep by agitators of corporations.

The present session has cast the state $1,000,000 and the taxpayers will be glad to know that no important time has come.

Judge Rich's and Railway Employes.

The rule of conduct laid down by Judge Rich of the United States circuit court for the direction and control of railway employes of state, if it can be enforced in practice, will be followed by the majority of working results.

In most instances, the court will, on argument, sustain the action of So far as the newspaper reports enable us to judge, that order will be effectuated. The railroads, however, have little time to act, and the bill may be delayed, if not suspended, by the time of adjournment of the legislature. The legislative session, however, will be adjourned at the end of April, so that the bill will be introduced again in the next session.
